time and place appointed for appraisement, to two persons, being of the next of kin, as also to two of the creditors of the deceased, and in their presence, proceed to the valuation of all and singular the deceased's goods, chattels, wares and merchandises, such as ready money, household furniture, cloathing, negroes, stock of cattle, corn, the crop on hand begun in the lifetime of the deceased, and every sort of property in and about the house, of what kind soever, not being a freehold, or parcel of it, or fixed to it, (the convenient apparel of the widow, according to her degree excepted;) as also of all leases for years, how long soever the term may be, simply and determinable on a life, or lives, and likewise continuing freeholds, not descendible; but care ought to be taken not to confound a descendible freehold, which belongs to the heir, with one that is not so; a freehold descendible,
